

Vilma Wallace

A native of St. Thomas, US Virgin Islands, Vilma began her passion for service as a youth. She volunteered at the local hospital, was a member of Girl Scouts and participated in many social and civic organizations and activities. After relocating to Atlanta she continued to serve by volunteering with the Girl Scouts and eventually became a full time staff person where she worked with the Outreach Program as a Membership Specialist. She continued working in the nonprofit sector as a Program Director with the Boys and Girls Clubs of Metro Atlanta. Vilma Wallace is the Volunteer Services Manager at the Atlanta Community Food Bank. She received her B.S. from Clayton State University and her MBA from Strayer University. In her spare time Vilma enjoys line dancing, shopping, spending quality time with her family and the beaches of the Virgin Islands.
